

LOUIS MOINET
1806

DATOSCOPE Burgundy

The Datoscope is an elegant and sophisticated watch that reflects the brand's roots through its dial decoration, inspired by the talented work of Louis Moinet. Its round, pure, and powerful new case houses an exceptional mechanical self-winding movement. Its oscillating weight is entirely original and shaped like the Côtes du Jura® motif. It winds in both directions, and its oscillation is highlighted by a superimposed shield bearing the Louis Moinet symbols.

CHRONOVINTAGE Charcoal

This extraordinary chronograph is distinguished by its understated appearance. It enables the wearer to count off minutes in an elegant and highly visible manner by means of a central hand displaying them around the outer minute track. Its legendary mechanical movement dates back to the early 1970s and is virtually impossible to find today. Only a small number of these movements have been preserved and upgraded by Les Ateliers Louis Moinet.

VARIOGRAPH Charcoal

This watch features two innovations, both of which are exclusive creations of Louis Moinet. The first is its Full Moon Indicator, which is distinguished from standard moon-phase watches by a precise indication of the day of the full moon. The second is the World Map, which spins once on its axis every 24 hours. The ring surrounding it enables simplified and easy reading of the time around the world, at a specified given time. It has been adjusted to Greenwich Mean Time and is not synchronized with a particular local time. It represents an artistic depiction of the world in motion. Variograph is an eloquent illustration of the Louis Moinet creative version of traditional horology.

TWINTECH Old Rose Dial

The Twintech possesses an exclusive movement based on original sketches of a twin barrel published by Louis Moinet in 1848. Its advanced twin barrel technology provides a 120-hour power reserve that is three times more powerful than a normal watch. It features a power reserve indicator and retrograde date.

TEMPOGRAPH

Black

Tempograph is an incomparable watch endowed with all-new technology and made up of 125 parts. The first distinctive feature is its retrograde seconds mechanism, which is constantly on the move. The watch is a non-stop visual delight, enlivened by the regular ballet of a hand that marks off the time in ten-second segments alternating with an instant retrograding motion.

VERTALIS TOURBILLON

The Vertalis intensifies the magic of the tourbillon by connecting its carriage to the barrel by means of a hand-drawn and beveled vertical bar. To add to the fascinating vision of the tourbillon carriage in motion, this watch offers an openworked version of the barrel. The latter's cover performs an average rotation in six hours and enables one to keep visual check on the power reserve according to the state of wind of the barrel spring. Louis Moinet displays its determination to combine aesthetic and technical aspects, particularly through the vertical bar that showcases the technology of the watch, while extending over onto the case. This original and modern way of uniting displays, technology, and casing is directly inspired by the historical world of Louis Moinet, and especially by some of the drawings published in his famous Traité d'Horlogerie in 1848.
